

Project Proposal

Context:

In 2018, the world produced $> 50,000$ metric tons of stainless steel. The addition of certain elements during the production of stainless steel can stabilize the structure into a specific crystal structure depending on the percentage of elements used.

Objective:

Classify the crystal structure of stainless steel grades based on percentage of elements required by its respective standard.